

Nick
Bell
Design

CV

Nic Carter
Designer

Nic joined the Nick Bell Design in 2011 in a supporting role for both Nick and David. He is involved with projects at every stage, from design development and client contact, to production management.

Originally trained in Fine Art at Goldsmiths University, Nic worked with London's White Cube for six years, reaching the position of Operations Manager for the company's Hoxton Square gallery and East End warehouses. While at White Cube, he acted as Project Manager on several redevelopments of gallery and warehouse spaces, managing project schedules and budgets, and working with architects and specialist contractors.

Nic returned to University to study Graphic Design in 2008 at the London College of Communication, gaining a distinction upon graduation in 2011. He has also spent time working with other London-based studios SEA and SAS, and he recently won a place as a member of the International Society of Typographic Designers.

Born in Sheffield in 1981, Nic lives now lives in East London. Aside from the visual arts, his other interests include cycling and live music.